

LanSchool Partners with FedResults to Enter Federal Government Market

April 1, 2010 Herndon, VA: FedResults, Inc the premier provider of Government business development services and LanSchool Technologies LLC, a leading provider of classroom management software, today announced a strategic partnership utilizing FedResults' TeamINFO Services. This partnership enables LanSchool to quickly expand into the federal government marketplace with an experienced mentor well known to the government sector.

Recognizing the government's diverse teaching environments, LanSchool products support a wide array of platforms including PCs, Macs and Thin Clients such as NComputing, Terminal Services and Citrix. "With the federal mandate to offer continued career development coupled with increased cost containment (in sourcing), demand for in-place 'focused' classroom instruction has increased while outside distractions like social media apps continues to grow. LanSchool provides a fence around today's IT classroom and ensures a distraction free environment" said Bob Dinkel, President of FedResults. "The government classroom is no different from the learning environment our kids have grown up in and providing the same safeguards against unwarranted disruptions makes a lot of sense. Especially when the tax payer is footing the bill'.

Under terms of the agreement, LanSchool will provide its innovative technology solutions, technical support and direction, while FedResults will provide opportunity sales assistance, contracting support via FedResults IT 70 schedule GS-35F-0256K, and order fulfillment to government sector accounts including State & Local users of the GSA IT 70 contract.

"We estimate that the government trains thousands of individuals in thousands of classrooms annually. Adding FedResults as a partner allows us to address the government market while keeping our existing staff focused on near term business opportunities" said Ben Cahoon, vice president of marketing for LanSchool. "We have a successful commercial footprint and know the same needs and requirements exist in the government sector. Having the know-how to tap the federal marketplace and where to focus your resources is where FedResults shines'.
